Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Happy New Year - Chief Ralph

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Happy New Year - Chief Ralph

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Happy New Year - Chief Ralph

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Happy New Year - Chief Ralph

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Happy New Year - Chief Ralph

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Happy New Year - Chief Ralph

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Happy New Year - Chief Ralph

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Happy New Year - Chief Ralph

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Happy New Year - Chief Ralph

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Happy New Year - Chief Ralph

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Happy New Year - Chief Ralph

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Happy New Year - Chief Ralph

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Happy New Year - Chief Ralph

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Happy New Year - Chief Ralph

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.

Be Prepared for the Unexpected

By now you have spent a week looking at, using, and appreciating your new goodies. Before they become common place and you forget, PLEASE add these awesome things to your home inventory.

Having descriptions, serial numbers, photos and proof of purchase price will be invaluable should the need ever arise. Insurance companies need to know what you own, police will want to get good descriptions of what's missing should bad things happen, and you'll know your property's worth. Don't have a home inventory? That's okay; it's easy to do, doesn't take a lot of time and you'll feel better having it should the need ever arise. Work with your insurance company or just find a home inventory form on the internet. Work on one room at a time over the course of each weekend. By spring, you'll have documented everything you own. Take photos and record serial numbers. Take GOOD photos of your jewelry and KNOW what it's worth. Save the photos and inventory somewhere safe and away from the valuable things that could get stolen.

Enjoy your new items. Secure your home to protect them from loss or lock them to stationary objects when not in use if applicable. Keep your stuff until it's time to pass it on to charity or another less fortunate soul.
